CRE Experts Come Together to Discuss Market Conditions and Opportunities

NAIOP NJ Panelists Offer Insight for Strategizing in Uncertain Market

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (Sept. 28, 2022) – NAIOP New Jersey's "CEO Perspective FOMO vs. FOHO: Is It Time to Buy, Sell or Hold?" program last week brought together leading minds in New Jersey commercial real estate to discuss the industry's new era of growing risks and shared insights into unlocking a competitive advantage in a shifting economic environment.

"Our panelists offered compelling, thoughtful commentary on a topic that is so relevant for our members," said Michael McGuinness, NAIOP New Jersey chief executive officer. "Information is power, and for those who were fortunate to attend the program they certainly left with insight that will be beneficial for their business strategies."
